

The Portrait

Verse 1            Under a midnight moon
                      By the ocean touched in blue light
                      You wrapped us in a cocoon
                      In your black overcoat around us tight

Refrain            And I saw in your eyes
                      A look that would never die
                      And I've dreamed all my life
                      Of that night

Chorus             Of the midnight moon
                      That I painted in blue
                      The midnight moon
                      When I fell into you
                      The midnight moon

Verse 2            The wind tangled your hair
                      You confessed you weren't perfect but I
                      Saw perfection there
                      So I painted your portrait that night

Refrain            And I saw in your eyes
                      A look that would never die
                      And I've dreamed all my life
                      Of that night

Chorus             Of the midnight moon
                      That I painted in blue
                      The midnight moon
                      When I fell into you

Post-Chorus        And the portrait that I made
                          Hangs on our wall today

Music Break
Middle 8            Sometimes I feel like I'm standing
                          Alone on that beach in the dark
                          And I search through the haze
                          For yesterday
                          And that look on your face

Verse 3            Sometimes when I forget
                      Just what you mean to me
                      I look at the portrait I painted
                      Of you and the blue butterfly
                      And all that we found on that night

Chorus
Post-Chorus
Chorus Vamp        Of the midnight moon ...
                          And the portrait that I made ...
                          The midnight moon that I painted in blue...
